Experiment No.:	2
Aim:	Design UX
Theory:	Figma is a powerful design tool that has revolutionized the way designers work together on creating web and mobile app interfaces. It is an all-in-one design and prototyping platform that enables designers to create, share, and collaborate on designs in real-time, making it an essential tool for designers, developers, and stakeholders in the design process. A wireframe is a simple visual guide that represents the skeletal framework of a website or digital product. Think of it as the blueprint for your final design. You're providing enough detail so that everyone knows the shape of the wall, but you're not getting so deep into it that you're giving exact details on the type of brick the walls should be made of (that comes later). Though wireframes are most often created by designers, they need to be basic enough so that everyone from other designers, stakeholders, devs, and users can understand the ideas.

	Start by creating a new project in Figma. Use Figma's design tools to create wireframes for the crime reporting template. Begin with low-fidelity wireframes to focus on layout and functionality before adding visual design elements. Design the following key screens: <ul style="list-style-type: none">a. Home screen with a map displaying nearby criminal activity.b. Blog upload screen with form fields for title, content, and location.c. User registration and login screens.d. User profile and settings screens.e. Alerts screen for displaying nearby criminal activity alerts.f. Blog feed screen to view and interact with user-submitted blogs.
